Brendan, a native of Battle Ground in Southwest Washington, is one of WFC Rangers' new generation of talented younger coaches. Brendan, who currently plays center midfield for Bellingham United, played at Western Washington University and at Columbia River High School, where he was the Greater Saint Helens League player of the year in his senior season. Brendan, who majored in engineering, was a four-year letter winner at WWU, where he finished tied for seventh among career assist leaders with 13. He was a second team Great Northwest Athletic Conference selection in his senior year and an honorable mention GNAC selection his freshman year. Brendan and Bellingham United teammate Sean Connor spent part of January and February training with VV Zwammerdam in The Netherlands. VV Zwammerdam is a sister club of Bellingham United. "It's always good to see how other coaches do things and how other clubs do things in different countries," Quilici told the Bellingham Herald in an interview before leaving for Holland. "You get to see different tactics and styles and learn new things with a different perspective."
